Many New Jersey vaccination sites announced Sunday they are closing on Monday due to the winter storm that is forecast to deliver as many as 24 inches of snow to the northern part of the state.

The governor's office also announced in a state of emergency declaration that all six mega-sites will temporarily shutter Monday as well.

Some counties have already re-scheduled appointments, while others are finding new times.

"Depending on the extent of the storm, operations of vaccine sites on Tuesday may also be disrupted," the health department wrote Sunday in a message to those scheduled to receive vaccines soon. The department said all Monday appointments will likely be rescheduled.

This is only a partial list of what's being reported statewide, based on a survey of government websites. Please check with your individual location for the latest information.

Bergen County

The vaccination site at the Alternate Care Facility Annex at Bergen New Bridge Medical Center will close Monday. All appointment have been rescheduled for the same time Tuesday, and residents will need to show proof of their original appointment.

The Morris County Regional Vaccination Center is not currently open to the general public. It was closed over the weekend due to lack of supply, and it shut down Monday because of weather, according to the county's website.

Ocean County has cancelled all appointments at their COVID-19 vaccination sites at Toms River High School North and the Southern Regional Middle School, as well as the drive-thru testing clinic at Ocean County College, officials announced.

Passaic County is rescheduling vaccine clinics for both Monday and Tuesday, using the following schedule:

Monday appointments will be moved to Friday, Feb. 5 and Saturday, Feb. 6. Those with Friday appointments will receive an updated time.

Tuesday appointments are being moved to Wednesday, Feb. 3 at the same time as the original appointment and those will be notified via email.

Union County

The Union County vaccine clinic at Kean University is normally closed on Mondays and is open on an appointment-only basis Tuesday.

Tuesday's appointments are already booked and county officials advised residents to check the county's vaccine page for updates.
